

Eastern Kentucky health stats are gloomy. Why are these 'bright spots' doing better?

By Bill Estep

bestep@herald-leader.com

July 24, 2018 07:20 AM

Whitley City

The public library in McCreary County has books, of course, and reading programs for young people and computers for people to access the internet.

But it also provides information on substance abuse, hosts healthy-cooking classes and diabetes workshops, puts on book walks that combine reading and exercise for kids and helps patrons research health issues.

Director Kay Morrow, a social worker by training, said it's important for the library to be a community resource that's more than a collection of books.

Read more here:

<https://www.kentucky.com/news/state/article215252635.html#storylink=cpy>

Last updated on July 24, 2018.

Print

Table of Contents

NEWS

News & publications

The news about recent activities for needed peoples.

More News

28 Mar 2025

AppalReD Hosts FEMA Appeals Clinic

AppalReD Legal Aid collaborated with the Floyd County Fiscal Court to host a...

Continue Reading

28 Mar 2025

Flood victims in Kentucky need all kinds of help for a long, long time

By Erin Bottomlee and Angeleigh DorseyKentuckians know all too well that on any...

Continue Reading